WASHINGTON, D.C. – ADAP Advocacy today, as part of its 340B Project, published an infographic that exposes declining charity care by hospitals and its impact on patients, especially minorities. The infographic complements the recently released commercial and is part of the ongoing 340B national advocacy campaign, "*Is the 340B Drug Pricing Program the Next 'Too Big to Fail'?*"

The '340B Too Big to Fail – Charity Care' infographic examines the requirements for hospitals to provide free care and financial aid to poor patients, also known as charity care. What's particularly striking is that charity care continues to decline year after year. Patients owe at least $220 billion in medical debt, and nearly 75% of it is owed to hospitals, with Black and Hispanic communities disproportionately impacted.

The infographic can be downloaded online here:
